

7 NOVEMBER 2012

CATERINA POMINI

18031

DISCOVER ROMAN FLORENCE

The colony the Romans named Florentia was founded by Julius Caesar himself as a military camp. Around the "castrum" all the typical Roman buildings were constructed in the first and second centuries AD. Due to its bellicose origin, the city was blessed by the God Mars, who was the first Patron Saint of Florence.

Tradition states that Florentia was founded in 59 BC by Gaius Julius Caesar for precise political and strategic reasons: Fiesole had been a haven for catilinarians and the Roman general wanted an outpost to control the access to and from the area. The original Roman military camp was basically a square subdivided by seven streets on the north-south axis, intersected by five streets on the east-west axis. Florence's position near the Via Cassia and within the Valley of the River Arno helped the new Roman settlement to flourish and to quickly become an important trade centre. In the first and second centuries AD, a bridge, an aqueduct, a forum, the baths, a theatre and an amphitheatre were added to the city.

The perimeter of the Roman colony can still be noticed in today's maps; in fact, you can clearly see the nucleus of the first agglomeration with the orthogonal streets intersected by the cardo and the decumanus, now identifiable in Via Strozzi, Via del Corso and Via degli Speziali (which cut the city centre from west to east) and Via Roma and Via Calimala (which cut it from north to south).

Florence had an extraordinary development in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance and for this reason not many Roman monuments survive today; however, the remains of the baths and an ancient textile center were discovered under Piazza della Signoria, next to the downhill street heading towards Piazza San Firenze (Via de' Gondi), where it is likely that the theatre was situated. The most recognizable monument of the Roman period is the amphitheatre which, even if engulfed by Medieval buildings, still maintains its elliptical form (Via Torta).

Contrary to what you may think, almost all the Roman Archeological exhibits in Florence derive from Rome: the statues of the Loggia dei Lanzi, the Uffizi Gallery, the Pitti Palace and the Boboli Gardens all come from the Eternal City and were brought to Florence during the reign of the Medici and the Lorena.

Did you enjoy reading this article? If yes, then check out all our Tuscany tour reviews; if you are planning to visit Tuscany, they might be useful!